There are over two million people in the UK living with sight loss – any number of them could be your customers or employees. How can you best communicate with them and meet their needs? The RNIB Visual Awareness training course will give you all the answers. The course will teach participants how to minimise the barriers that people with a sight condition face in their daily lives.

Who should attend?

This course has been designed for anyone who may come into contact with people who have sight loss, for example retail staff, education and training professionals, emergency services, health and social care staff, housing associations, legal services, public sector workers and leisure services providers.

This training event will cover a variety of topics including:

- Common eyesight conditions;
- Legislative considerations;
- Guiding exercises.

If you have any special requirements in order for you to attend this event please contact the CPD Department to advise.
